For some people it is just an excuse for going to priest instead of doctors. They are therefore - in mental illnesses such as schizophrenia - part of the defence system used by the illness to perpetuate itself - as well as being actual products of organic brain damage and malfunction So they are both part of the denial mechanism and part of the symptomology In other words if you are seeing demons - you are nuts! It is highly likely that the next Papacy will bring with it a major liberalisation in Catholicism I just wish that all the wings of Christendom would learn to be a bit more loving to each other and on that base build a more friendly attitude to the rest of the world including the secular world Rather like the nun who ran the bar in the Catholic Convent Hotel I stayed in round the back of St Peters, who poured me a brandy using the correct optic, stared at the result rather quizzically, smiled sweetly at me, said oh dear that is far too small! took the optic off the bottle, threw it away, and then practically filled the glass That's better she said And in the morning they prayed for their guests Now THAT is a hotel! That has been my take. Phar Lap/oz denies so much of Christianity that without understanding (or caring), he calls Jesus a liar almost daily. John W Halfway there - you actually have made two statements - the first is correct Phar Lap/oz denies so much of Christianity I do so openly and in accordance with the millions of people who are seeking an abandonment of archaic theology in favour of a major and radical reform of Christianity I do not see the connection between Johannine Pauline Christianity and either the person or the religion of Jesus In common with innumerable scholars and countless modern Christians I see them as largely separate entities.(maybe I shouldn't use that word with you) One cannot call Jesus a liar in that the record we have of his words is so limited, factional and potentially inaccurate that we really cannot be entirely sure what he did say Paul however left writings - which IF they are untampered with cast very severe doubt on his honesty and his behaviour, They would suggest that Christianity as we have it is far more a product of the serial killer Saul of Tarsus (Paul) than of Jesus of Nazareth I think I am right to separate the two + +

This is appropriate when one understands that there are no demons as described and claimed by be xian mythology. From my notes, no doubt sourced from elsewhere and I have not yet got it cross referenced. There is no doubt that jw again does not know what it is muttering about. Beelzebub Also known as Beelzebuth, Belzebuth, Baalzebub, Ba'al zebub (and known as Achor by the Cyreneans), which probably meant 'Lord of the High House', referring to the Canaanite chief god 'Baal the prince'. This title could only properly apply to Solomon in his temple, so the Jews changed the name to Beelzebub which translates as 'Lord of Flies', probably because of his supposedly role as creator and controller of the flies in the Philistine city of Ekron. One of the oldest and most famous demonic figures, Beelzebub also had command over disease (flies congregate around the corpses of the dead, and spread disease from the dead to the living) and his role is to tempt men with pride. Beelzebub came to be regarded as the leading representative of the fallen gods, referred to as the Devil himself in Matthew, 12, 24, he is mentioned as 'Prince of the Devils' and this appellation has stuck, even though Milton has him next in rank to Satan (Paradise Lost, I, 79). Witches and Satan worshippers call Satan the horned god. And for good reason. He is the Prince of the Evil ones. And he is the only evil spirit who has horns in some manifestations. It is true there is a horned god but it is not your bogey jezebeth, it is a Celtic god. Being that god was very and is very important to be Celtic mythology, of course xians demonised it as best they could. Cernunnos Cernowain, Cernenus, Herne The Hunter, Hu Gadarn, Belatucadros, Vitiris. Known to all the Celtic areas in one form or another. The Horned God, God of Nature, God of the Underworld. The Druids knew him as Hu Gadarn, the Horned God of Fertility. Usually depicted as sitting in a lotus position with horns/antlers on his head, a beard, naked except for a neck torque and sometimes holding a shield and spear. His symbols included the stag, ram, bull and horned serpent. Virility, fertility, animals, physical love, Nature, woodlands, reincarnation, crossroads, wealth, commerce, warriors, hunt, magick, sacrifice. Cernunnos Gaul Cernunnos was the god of the underworld & of animals The horned reindeer horns god of virility, he is accompanied by a ram headed serpent & a stag He was often depicted holding a bag of money, possibly signifying he was considered a god of fertility also CERNUNNOS Horned god of virility. Cernunnos wears the torc (neck ring) and is ever in the company of a ram headed serpent and a stag. Extremely popular among the Celts, the Druids encouraged the worship of Cernunnos, attempting to replace the plethora of local deities and spirits with a national religion. The Celts were so enamored of Cernunnos that his cult was a serious obstacle to the spread of Christianity. Cernunnos In Celtic mythology, Cernunnos was the god of the underworld and of animals. He is depicted as a man with the antlers of a stag. Known as the horned one, many of his images appear all over the Celtic world. He is a hunter and is usually seen squatting in a common, cross legged, hunter's position. He is seen holding serpents, signifying his mastery of the otherworld. In the Mabinogi he is shown as a lord of animals. He is a strong part of the male principal in celtic myth. He was a god of purification through sacrifice and selection. Primal fertility God, consort to the Great Mother, also depicted as Lord of the Woodlands and Keeper of the Gates to the Otherworld. In fact, non-Catholic teaching is that if you look at the LONG list of Roman Catholic saints, the earliest saints on the list are converted demons those the pagan gentiles brought into the Roman In fact, if you look at the earliest saints you notice they were pagan gods & not demons that were converted. And how do you know that I am not one of these female spiritual advisors? It hadn't occurred to me. If you are then no doubt you understand the quandary in the Catholic Church over this vexed issue, where there is quite a large problem of theological evolution occurring. Contrary to the feelings of the more rabid right wing Protestants there is a lot of progress taking place in the Catholic Church, including the more open examination of sexual abuse problems. It is highly likely that the next Papacy will bring with it a major liberalisation in Catholicism Wrong. The next Pope will most probably be a conservative. John Paul appointed all but 10 of the Cardinals eligible to vote. Although he has given a red hat to a few liberals, the majority of them are doctrinally conservative. The Italians want an Italian Pope but I think the next one will be from Africa or Latin America. Just be sure he stays as anti- non-Catholic Christian as humanly possible, so that he can continue to fulfill the prophesies concerning anti-Christ.
